Trimester 1

Becoming a Chaplain (UG:C7227B)
Professional Chaplaincy (PG:C8127B)

This unit gives students an opportunity to understand the unique vocation of chaplaincy, introducing its distinctive characteristics, theological priorities, defining activities, and core competencies. Students will explore the broad role of the chaplain, then focus on aspects of working in and leading teams, engaging with legal and organisational standards, and pursuing professional effectiveness. The unit will also expose students to some of the dilemmas, challenges, and opportunities faced by chaplains in the practice of professional chaplaincy across a variety of contexts.

Chaplaincy: Supervised Ministry Experience (PG: P8171B) by request only

This unit includes teaching material on group work and community development, but its primary focus is a ministry placement in a chaplaincy setting with a qualified chaplain mentor. Students will get practical, hands-on experience in chaplaincy with the opportunity to reflect on the various ministry functions in which they will be involved.

Christ, Culture, & Identity, Issues in Theology (UG: T7292B; PG: T9291B)
Prerequisites for UG and PG: 18 cp in Theology

"Who am I?" How do we answer this in a world under the pressures of competing claims about race, gender, politics, economics, and the digital world of social influencers? Belonging to groups ('tribes') of like-minded people can be life giving, helping us to deal with the pressures and confusion of life when faced with these competing claims. Tribes formed around such things as race, religion, gender, education, wealth, work, sport, or political affiliation give us a place to belong and allow us to maintain and deepen links with "our people." But the tribal instinct is also an instinct to exclude – to differentiate between 'us' and 'them.' The resulting identity-centred conflicts lead to increasing fragmentation in society and are inevitably destructive of social cohesion.

This class is a Christian exploration of the identity question in the context of a range of contemporary critical theories that seek to shape our personal identity and manipulate us to identify with a certain tribe, while excluding others. It will encourage us to centre our identity in Christ and his people, rather than in any of the 'identities and tribes' promoted in our present cultural environment.

Critical Thinking and Writing in Theological Studies (UG:A7100B)
Critical Academic Skills in Theological Education (PG:A8100B)

Why does asking questions improve our critical thinking skills? How can we ask questions that invite dialogue, engage diversity, and probe issues and problems more deeply? Is there a right answer to every question? When reading, when do we soak up a lot of information like a sponge, and when should we select and filter it? Why do critical readers read the conclusion of an article or book first? What is a "hook" and a "thesis statement," and why do the introductions to our essays need them? How do we integrate the views of "scholars" into our writing? The learning activities in this class will respond to these questions and will improve critical thinking, reading, and writing skills for theological studies.

Old Testament, Introduction to the (UG: B7110B; PG: B8110B)

Step into the world of the Old Testament and discover God's good creation, humans in God's image, and harmony with God, one another, and the world. And then, suddenly, it's all broken! Humans seek to be like God on their own terms, rebelling against God and breaking relationships. Yet one thing remains unchanged: God's relentless, pursuing love, reaching out to draw people back and working to restore creation. See how Israel is called to join God in this mission. Through fascinating stories, powerful poetry, challenging laws, unexpected characters, and ancient practices that may seem strange to us today, discover the God of grace at work. Wonder at the faithful God who continues to offer hope despite human failure, promising his people new hearts and pointing forward to a servant King who will bring justice and restoration.

Revelation (UG: B7279B Prerequisite: B7203; PG: B9291B Prerequisite: 9cp biblical studies)

What if Revelation is not primarily a book about predicting the future, but an invitation to see God, the church, and our mission in the world in a new way? Through vivid visions, mysterious symbols, powerful images, and unexpected scenes, Revelation challenges its readers to reimagine what God is up to in the world. This class will explore how Revelation spoke to its first readers and what its message might mean for Christians today. Come and discover a book that is far more than beasts, battles, and end-times predictions—and see why reading Revelation in light of God's mission can change our whole perspective on this fascinating book.

Introduction to Church History (UG:H7100B; PG:H8100B)

A FULLY ONLINE module

We are living in an increasingly 'ahistoric age', rejecting the study of history as if it has no value for the present day: history is full of irrelevant stories and unenlightened ideas. This approach fails to recognise that no matter what age we live in, all of us have been formed, shaped, and influenced by history. Unlike other faiths, Christianity is founded upon the claim that God was enfleshed, lived, died, and rose again in a particular time and place. For the Christian, history MATTERS. Without it, we risk losing our identity and connection to the person we worship. In a unique/fully-online format, using short video lectures, forum discussions, and primary source readings, we will explore the dynamic story of Christianity and the ways in which it shaped and continues to shape the Church today.

Counselling, Introduction to: A Pastoral Care Approach (UG:C7100B)
Pastoral Counselling in Ministry: A Pastoral Care Approach (PG:C8102B)

Those engaged in Pastoral Care will often find themselves called upon to offer Pastoral Counselling formally or informally. How does one prepare? How do Pastoral Care and Counselling overlap? What is distinctive about Pastoral Counselling? What are its relationships to the Bible, theology, and the behavioural sciences? And what are the attitudes, values, strategies, and skills that help turn a well-meaning conversation into a therapeutic dialogue? Explore these and other questions while developing the basic skills of this very practical and important aspect of pastoral care.

Issues in Faith and Science (UG:T7291B; PG:9256B) – Prerequisites for UG and PG: 9cp in Theology

Have you ever felt torn about having to make a choice between the doctrines of creation and evolution at school? Do you accept most of the findings of modern science in your daily life yet find this stance difficult to reconcile with your life as a believer? Do you wonder if it might be possible to take a more coherent and consistent approach that doesn't require dividing your understanding of the world and your place in it? If you answered yes to any or all of these then this is the course for you.

Hermeneutics (UG: B7203B) - Prerequisite: 9cp of Level 7100 B units
Hermeneutics of the Bible (PG: B9203B) - Prerequisite: 9cp of Level 8100 B units

At various times in history, the Bible has been misunderstood or even misused to justify injustice, fuel division, or advance ideas far removed from God's intent because of flawed methods of reading and interpretation. Reading verses out of context or assuming that a literal interpretation is always the best method may distort Scripture's true message and cause serious harm. On the other hand, understanding the Bible isn't always simple; time, language, and cultural gaps stand between the contemporary reader and the ancient world of the text. This class explores old and new techniques to bridge interpretation gaps and generate a more faithful, contextual, and wholistic understanding of Scripture.

Introduction to the New Testament (UG:B7150B; PG:B8150B)

Experience the New Testament from a fresh perspective, through the eyes and circumstances of its first hearers. Who were the authors of the NT books? How did their writings come to be in the Bible? What happened in the 450 years between the Old and New Testaments, and how does this shape the NT world? Why do we have more than one account of Jesus' earthly life? Explore these and other questions as we seek together to understand what it means to be a follower of Christ.

Pastoral Preaching (UG:P7150B; PG:P8150B)

When God speaks, new life is formed. As a preacher, you get to participate in proclaiming God's life-giving word. It's a great privilege but also a challenge. In this course, we will explore together how we can listen well, write well, and then deliver well. You will learn by doing, as you prepare and deliver sermons. Whether your context is a Sunday morning gathering or youth group devotions, if you're new to preaching or looking to grow your skills, this course will grow your ability to communicate what God is saying today.

Trimester 3

Chaplaincy (Studies in): Complexities & Tensions (UG:C7192B; PG:C8195B)

The practice of chaplaincy comes with its fair share of complexities and tensions. Some chaplaincy work is difficult and requires a higher level of knowledge and skills to move through (complexities), while other chaplaincy work is theologically or ethically challenging and difficult to navigate (tensions). This unit will explore how chaplains can navigate difficult territories of practice through the development of a personal practice framework. Issues explored include, diversity of gender and sexuality, interfaith engagement, child protection, family violence, critical incidents, disability, mental health etc. The unit material will delve into the personal, professional, and contextual dimensions of these issues, building up the student's personal practice framework along the way.

Digital Media and Human Flourishing (UG:P7291B; PG:P9291B)
Prerequisites for UG and PG: 18 cp Pastoral Theology

Like fish in water, we are immersed in a world increasingly mediated to us in digital form, making its impact on our lives almost invisible. A very small number of Tech Titans control the digital tools that we use every day without thinking. We created the technology to make life easier, to save time, reduce effort, and give us more freedom. And in many ways, it has delivered exactly that. But somewhere along the way, the relationship shifted. The tools that were meant to serve us started shaping us. The apps designed to help us connect began determining how we feel. The platforms built to inform us started deciding what we think about. And most of us barely noticed it happening. As Henry David Thoreau put it, have we become the tools of our tools? We are not just a user of these systems; in many cases we are the product. Every app, platform, and device we use was built with a specific goal in mind. And that goal is rarely our flourishing as people created in God's image.

This unit is intended to be an exploration of the subtle (and at times not-so subtle) impact digital technology has on our daily lives, our relationships, and what it means to flourish as a person created in the image of God.

Doctrine of Christian Holiness (UG: T7218B) - Prerequisites: 18cp in Theology
Doctrine of Christian Holiness (PG: T9217B) - Prerequisites: 9 cp in Theology

All Christian churches believe that God has called Christ-followers to be holy, and that through his grace, the work of transformation has begun. But how far does this work of transformation go in this present life? What are the critical points in the debate? What exactly does a holy life look like today? Does it even matter if people are saved by grace alone? Answer these and other questions as you examine the biblical and theological material and then reflect on its impact for your life and ministry.
